Reflection: A New Christmas Tradition

By Sarah Dixon Young

At Christmas time, we do things differently.

The house is decorated differently. We eat different foods. We sing different

The ho-hum of the rest of the year fades in the twinkle and sparkle of lights, yet we expect our different traditions to remain the same.

It wouldn't be a tradition if it wasn't the exact recipe, the exact decor, the exact group of people, the exact location that it was before. Even in our month of differences, we want it to remain the same, or the season leaves us feeling disappointed with unmet expectations.

The truth is that we are creatures of habit. Routine makes us comfortable. Tradition is familiar and nostalgic.

Jesus came to break us out of our routines.

He knew that what is comfortable, familiar, and nostalgic wouldn't be enough to free us from the burden of sin or the devastation of lostness.

The whole Old Testament shows a daily routine that didn't even change much for the holidays. Everyday, the priest was expected to offer sacrifices for sin. The tragic part was that the tradition didn't meet the need.

"[The law] can never, by the same sacrifices that are continually offered every year, make perfect those who draw near," Hebrews tells us. The Old Testament sacrificial system was broken and ineffectual.

And the Psalmist told us why: "You have neither desired nor taken pleasure in sacrifices and offerings and burnt offerings and sin offerings."

That was never what God wanted. The Jews got stuck in their routines and traditions and never even achieved the very thing they were looking for- a relationship with God.

Aren't we the same way? Even our Christmas traditions are routines that don't make us happy in the long run but leave us with the empty January doldrums. Even our Advent celebrations, candlelight services, and nativity scenes don't absolve us of our pride, selfishness, and greed.

But at the incarnation, Jesus said something that broke the endless cycle of routine:

"Sacrifices and offerings You have not desired, but a body you have prepared for me...Behold, I have come to do Your will, O God."

blowing, routine-breaking, tradition-smashing. It is Word within Word within Word, as Jesus, the Word, quotes His Word from Psalms, as He becomes the Word, fulfilling the Word He later spoke to the Hebrews.

"And every priest stands daily at his service, offering repeatedly the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins. But when Christ had offered for all time a single sacrifice for sins, He sat down at the right hand of God, waiting..."

Make this Advent a waiting that has never happened before, a time of embracing the single sacrifice for sins, a time of living out the will of God The incarnation is mind- in the body He gave you to be a living sacrifice, obediently following the One who came to bring what we've all been yearning for:

A loving relationship with our Creator God who never desired sacrifice but instead became a sacrifice so that we could draw near

Reflection: "A Voice in the Darkness—John the Baptist"

Pfau

by Fr. Bernard Pfau

I am fascinated with the Biblical character of John the Baptist! He was one of the greatest prophets that ever lived and sometimes considered the bridge between the Old and New Testaments. He compared himself to the Prophet Isaiah as the voice in the wilderness, yet lived at the time of Christ. John was a cousin of Jesus Christ and was very pronounced in pointing to Christ as the Promised One of Israel. He is one of the best voices for the Advent season, which is meant to call us to repentance and to prepare us for the Birth of the Savior. Let us look more closely at this humble servant of God who gave his life as he called all of Israel to repentance from their sins.

John is identified as the "The Baptist" since he went around baptizing the people who were anticipating the coming of the Messiah. Jesus himself asked to receive baptism from John, even though He was without sin. Jesus presents Himself as the leader of the new generation of children eager to serve the Lord totally. John baptized with water, but he pointed to Jesus as the one who came to fulfill all prophecies by baptizing with "water and the spirit". It is this Baptism that Christians receive to remove Original Sin from our souls and declare our obedience to the Risen Christ.

John is also identified as "The Voice" in the darkness. He pointed out Jesus as the "Light" for his own disciples to follow, as he knew his life was to end soon. He emptied himself of any glory and saw his role as a servant rather than as a king or leader. His physical Voice was silenced by his beheading
