Cavalier
Door-to-Door
Water Pipe
Inspections
Begin in June

The City of Cavalier is continuing the efforts to identify every drinking water service line in our water infrastructure. Beginning in June, team members from AE2S will begin going door-to-door to inspect the pipes attached to water meters. Crews from AE2S are identifying whether the service line that delivers water into the home is made of plastic, copper, galvanized steel, or lead. The engineering firm is contracted to complete the service line inspections for Cavalier.

“With AE2S team members going to door-to-door, this is a great opportunity for people who weren’t able to complete the online survey last year or who cannot physically access their service line to have someone else do it for them,” says Savana Barbie, AE2S LCRI Regional Project Manager.

The door-to-door effort is a continuation of the service line inventory Cavalier started in 2024 along with every water system in the United States. “We need to identify the pipe materials in all the public and private water infrastructure. This effort will likely continue until we have every single property’s pipe material added to our inventory. We need to know if there is lead in our water system so we can address it,” says Barry Walton, Cavalier City Operations Manager.

The team of AE2S staff will leave information on doors if people aren’t home. If you prefer to inspect your own service line, you can complete the short survey using this link: <https://bit.ly/CavalierPipes>. You will need to upload a photo of the pipe attached to your water meter so your survey response can be confirmed.

Funding assistance for the Cavalier LCRI project is provided through a contractual agreement between the North Dakota Department of Environmental Quality Drinking Water State Revolving Fund and AE2S.
