comedic relief for anyone who reads Road Apples (even more so for people who know me and my sagas in real-life), and that will have to do better than being relatable, for now.

I will try to think of some kind of small-town story that will make you laugh, but in the meantime, I'll let you know what I've been up to recently.

We've been working on the house in Lisbon, where Dan and I have lived for more than nine years.

My grandparents, who are both pushing 80, but can run circles around me given the right circumstances, decided they were coming down to help us paint the place before we moved to the Boxcar Ranch.

Being as busy as I am, there were times I had to leave my grandparents to their own devices while they cleaned and painted the walls that had been abused by toddlers for the last three years or so.

Kristina Spiekermeier-Dick took on the role at Lisbon's city auditor, replacing Gwen Crawford who took a similar position in Valley City. She is married to Travis "Norman" Dick and together have a daughter, Amber.

corner of town.

I think you may find it interesting to note that they asked if I knew of any potential stalkers I might have had.

I laughed, told them that I knew quite a few, actually, but what would make them think I had them in the time being?

"Because we keep seeing the same vehicles drive by, and a lot of times they drive by VERY slowly like they're looking for someone."

I shoved my words down my throat, thinking they wouldn't appreciate my standard joke/ explanation (these drivers are hoping for the chance to see a "famous" person!)

I also didn't tell them that there's at least one person that drives by a dozen times on a good day, probably about thirty times on a slow one.

But I did tell them that it's just small-town life.

As much as I can appreciate the things that come with living in a small town, I am more than alone at my house, they noticed ready to live out in the country.

Park River was a horse of another color for the Broncos. Coming off a 3rd place finish at the NDHSAA state tournament last week, Post 147 has a depth of talent that is on par with the boys of Lisbon. The second inning proved to be "the inning" in the game. Park River was able to get runners on the bases and move them with a nice bunt and timely hits, scoring four. Lisbon responded when Elliot Welter hustled out a dropped 3rd strike to get on base to be moved around by Eli Lyons and Cam Rondesvedt. Welter would score on a wild pitch, with Lyons and Rondesvedt coming in on a line drive from Jordyn Bittner, bringing the score to 4-3. That was as close as Post 7 would get in the game, falling 9-3.

Lisbon then traveled to Valley City for another hard-

Blaze Reinke, Colton Johnson and Elliot Welter. Valley City scored two in the fourth, one in the fifth, and one in the seventh on a walk off steal of home to win 5-4.

Hoping to get off the skid and end a two-game losing streak, Lisbon headed to Oakes on Sunday to finish a grind of five games in three days. Lincoln Adair led the way for the Broncos going 4 for 4 from the plate, knocking in 3 RBIs. Jordyn Bittner would take the mound and had a gem going through six innings. Bittner gave up only four hits with eleven strikeouts. Zade Heir of Oakes made things interesting in the 7th inning with a three-run triple to right field that brought the game to 6-5, but a great play by 1st baseman Colton Johnson to pitcher Jacob Lyons retired the inning and the game, giving Lisbon the win.
