FROM THE PUBLISHERS DESK

governments to the individuals within the community. It's hard to watch; it's hard to see something I feel so strongly about fall apart one community at a time.

Over the years, I have written many columns about why newspapers are important, why they need to survive, and how they are dedicated to serving their communities and bringing accountability to their local governments. Often my ramblings fall on deaf ears; newspapers are often taken for granted as a community service, but unfortunately, newspapers don't receive any special funding to pay our employees, keep the lights on, or print and mail our newspapers. We are dependent on you, our readers and our advertisers, to keep our newspapers alive.

So if you hear nothing else that I say, please keep reading, keep advertising, and please invest in your local newspaper by utilizing it. Reach out to us with your story ideas and support new ideas we take on to not only help us grow but to show off your businesses and events and reach your customers.

While our methods look different now because of these trying times, our mission remains the same: to bring you local stories, hold your governing bodies accountable, and supporting your communities.

Keep your communities alive and vibrant by supporting local journalism.
